PROGRAMME OVERVIEW

Sustainable Production and Consumption (SPC) address global environmental challenges, enhances resource efficiency, and ensures long-term business sustainability. Companies, government bodies, and financial institutions must adopt responsible production and consumption practices to achieve net-zero goals, minimise waste, and support circular economy principles. This training programme is designed to equip participants with the knowledge, strategies, and tools required to integrate sustainability into their operations. The programme will offer actionable insights for organisations aiming to align with global and national sustainability targets through policy frameworks, case studies, and interactive discussions.

OBJECTIVES

- Gain a comprehensive understanding of Sustainable Production and Consumption (SPC) principles.
- Develop insights into global and national policies related to SPC, ESG, and the circular economy.
- Learn strategies to enhance resource efficiency and minimise environmental impact.
- Acquire practical skills in sustainability management and explore financing models for sustainability initiatives.
- Strengthen decision-making using sustainability metrics and reporting tools.

CONTENT

Day 1: Foundations of Sustainable Production and Consumption

Participants will receive an overview of SPC, its significance, and its impact on businesses and policy frameworks. This session will cover key principles, regulatory requirements, and global commitments, enabling participants to align their strategies with sustainability goals.

Day 2: Strategies for Resource Efficiency and Circular Economy

This session will focus on implementing best practices and strategies for responsible production, resource optimisation, and circular economy. Discussions will explore sustainability integration within supply chains, the role of innovation, and methods to enhance operational sustainability.

Day 3: Financial Models, ESG Disclosures, and Action Planning

The final day will emphasise responsible consumption, financing mechanisms for sustainability, and reporting frameworks. Participants will gain insights into sustainability finance, ESG disclosures, and impact assessments. The programme will conclude with an interactive action-planning session, enabling participants to develop practical roadmaps for their organisations.

METHODOLOGY

The training employs an interactive approach, blending theoretical insights with real-world applications. Participants will engage in case studies, group discussions, and hands-on exercises to enhance practical understanding. The programme fosters experiential learning to ensure participants can implement sustainability strategies effectively within their organisations.

FACULTY

Dr Sweety Pandey, the Programme Director, is an expert in economic policy, sustainability, and climate strategy. She holds a PhD in Economics from Banaras Hindu University and has extensive experience with organisations such as NITI Aayog and PwC. Her work in climate policy, energy transition, and sustainable finance aligns closely with the programme's themes. At NITI Aayog, she played a crucial role in shaping India's energy and environmental policies. The programme will also feature leading practitioners and faculty members specialising in sustainability management, resource efficiency, and environmental governance.

PARTICIPANT PROFILE

This programme is designed for professionals across various sectors, including corporate sustainability managers, supply chain heads, CSR executives, policymakers, regulatory officials, environmental officers, ESG analysts, investment professionals, entrepreneurs, and consultants in sustainability-focused businesses.
